A LETTER FROM OUR FOUNDER

Dear Readers:

Welcome to the second issue of We Love Laguna Beach! I am Jennifer Halbert, founder, and my goal in creating this publication is to provide a resource for locals, new residents and visitors alike. The contents of this magazine include samplings of the finest entertainment, artists, restaurants, services and organizations in Laguna Beach.

Since our first edition launched, We Love Laguna Beach has morphed organically into much more — especially after teaming up with local social media extraordinaire, Kristin Nicholson, a.k.a. @kristinbytheocean. The magazine's online presence has grown, and its visibility in the community is even stronger. Kristin is a true leader, friend and talented person who shares my enthusiasm for marketing, volunteerism and helping others. She is a bright light that shines throughout the community.

When my family first introduced me to Laguna, I was immediately drawn to its eclectic, friendly people; gorgeous art; breathtaking beaches, and amazing properties. I moved from Florida to Los Angeles years ago to pursue an acting career. While searching for my own property, I developed an interest in real estate and decided to become a Realtor. Now my home is close to my family's in Laguna Beach and very near to my "second home" — Berkshire Hathaway HomeServices California Properties. My versatility stems from my vast experience in marketing, graphic design and acting, as well as a degree in communication, in which I focused on advertising and public relations. This — combined with the intense business and negotiating training I receive daily from my parents, brother and Berkshire Hathaway team — led me to become an award-winning real estate agent. I am so grateful for the tremendous love and support with which I have been blessed.

Giving back to the community is my way of expressing that appreciation. A portion of each of my closed transactions is donated to local charities. I also enjoy mentoring at my office and sharing my marketing skills with local small businesses to help them achieve their goals. In addition, I participate in many organizations, including The Ability Awareness Project, The Laguna Beach Chamber of Commerce, The Laguna Board of Realtors, Young Professionals Network, PUP Laguna Beach, Chabad of Laguna Beach, and more. I especially enjoy engaging in local events. When I am not helping in the community, you may find me creating abstract art; traveling; spending time with family; eating sushi; escaping to Joshua Tree with my better half; or walking my adorable Pomeranian mix, Bitsyl!

My joy in building relationships and helping others sparked my interest in this endeavor, and I hope you enjoy reading this issue as much as the team enjoyed putting it together. I would like to extend special thanks to the contributors, advertisers, family members and friends who always support me.

This issue is dedicated to my dear friend, Erika, who passed away this year — she was a huge supporter of mine throughout my creative journey and will forever be in my heart. Her encouragement and friendship gave me the strength to get that first issue off the ground.

Warm regards,

Jennifer Halbert

PRESERVING NATURE'S HAVEN:

A Closer Look at the Laguna Canyon Foundation

INTRODUCTION:

Nestled within the picturesque landscapes of Southern California, Laguna Canyon Foundation stands as a beacon of environmental conservation. With a mission deeply rooted in the preservation of natural habitats, this nonprofit organization has been working tirelessly to ensure the sustainability, accessibility, and beauty of the South Coast Wilderness and its surrounding areas.

MISSION:

At the heart of Laguna Canyon Foundation's work is a commitment to preserving, protecting, and enhancing the South Coast Wilderness. Its mission revolves around the understanding that these open spaces are not just landscapes but crucial ecosystems that deserve our care and attention. By fostering a sense of stewardship as well as doing hands-on work restoring and maintaining the open space, the Foundation aims to safeguard the region's unique biodiversity and provide a haven for both wildlife and the local community.

WORK:

Laguna Canyon Foundation employs a multifaceted approach to achieve its conservation goals. Through strategic land acquisitions, the organization expands protected areas and ensures the conservation of our wilderness, while maintaining safe and accessible trails for recreation. The Foundation is also actively involved in habitat restoration and maintenance projects, mitigating the impacts of human activities and invasive species.

In addition to land management, education plays a pivotal role in Laguna Canyon Foundation's work. The Foundation conducts a range of educational programs, engaging with Title I schools, local students, community groups, and nature enthusiasts. By fostering an understanding of the delicate balance within ecosystems, the Foundation empowers individuals to become advocates for the environment.

COMMUNITY OPPORTUNITIES:

In the heart of Laguna Canyon, a dedicated group of environmental stewards is leading the charge to protect and preserve the natural beauty of our cherished open spaces. Laguna Canyon Foundation, the trailblazing nonprofit behind this environmental mission, extends a warm invitation to all nature enthusiasts to become part of its efforts through a variety of engaging volunteer opportunities:

KEEP IT WILD:

Habitat Restoration Events

Join forces with Laguna Canyon Foundation and OC Parks for an immersive experience in habitat restoration. These stewardship events serve as a hands-on education in fostering a healthier environment for the native plants and wildlife that call the canyon home. Depending on the season, volunteers may find themselves involved in removing non-native plants, collecting seeds, or planting native flora. It's an opportunity to connect with nature while actively contributing to its preservation.

TRAIL STEWARDSHIP:

Embrace the Trails You Love

If you're an avid hiker, biker, or nature enthusiast who loves exploring the trails, Laguna Canyon Foundation's Trail Stewardship program offers a unique chance to give back. Dive into the heart of trail maintenance, gaining a new perspective on the pathways you know so well. No prior experience is needed; the work is both challenging and enjoyable. Tasks include clearing drains, pruning vegetation, and rebuilding eroded sections using tools such as loppers, picks, shovels, and McLeods. This hands-on approach ensures a sustainable, enjoyable experience for all trail users while protecting the delicate habitat.

GUIDED HIKES:

Explore and Learn with the Experts

Laguna Canyon Foundation's seasoned volunteers lead a series of guided hikes, catering to a diverse range of interests. Whether you're drawn to bird watching, fascinated by geology, interested in native plants, seeking family-friendly adventures, or aiming to stay fit with specialized fitness hikes, there's a guided hike for everyone. These educational outings not only provide insights into Laguna Canyon's unique ecosystem but also foster a sense of community among like-minded individuals.

Please join us! For more information on how to get involved, please email outreach@lagunacanyon.org, or visit our website at lagunacanyon.org/events.

RAFAEL POZAS: LAGUNA'S ADU EXPERT

by Sharael Kolberg

With limited affordable housing in Laguna Beach, Accessory Dwelling Units (ADUs) are a popular option for homeowners to add a residential unit to their property. They can be used as long-term rentals, to increase low-cost housing options in the city, while also providing an additional source of income for the homeowner. It's also convenient for those with elderly family members that need care, but want their own living space.

Rafael Pozas, CEO of Plus Höme Housing Solutions, is a second-generation real estate developer with a passion for building ADUs. He started learning the trade from his father in Brazil in the early '90s. In 2017, he moved to California, with his wife and two young children, to start his own construction business.

"We wanted to live in Orange County because I have a real estate training program in partnership with USC, I didn't want to be far Los Angeles, but I wanted a smaller city to raise our children in a safe environment," says Pozas. "Laguna was full of life, with a lot of people walking around."

In 2016, the state of California passed a bill that required cities to allow ADUs on single family residential lots, to address the housing shortage. Pozas, who has an MBA in international business, says he studied the new law and created Plus Hömes to help the homeowners supply the housing inventory that was needed.

"In the beginning, just a few people knew about the advantages of the (ADU) laws," says Pozas. "Now everybody knows what an ADU is and we are very busy."

Pozas is more than just a general contractor. Plus Hömes is involved in the entire project, from design and permits through construction. They start by providing two to three 3-D design options for the client to select from, then engage an architect to create plans for the city. Next, the plans are sent to a structural engineer, and the package is submitted to the city for permit approval.

"We are a one-stop shop," says Pozas. "My clients deal with me from day one to the last day. I can manage all of the customers' frustrations, anxieties and expectations because of my experience."

With his extensive knowledge of construction, and having built every type of ADU – from over-the-garage to detached or attached – Pozas says he has already solved problems that might be encountered, which makes the process smoother for his clients.

He says one thing that sets him apart from his competitors is that his bids are very accurate. He gathers an abundant amount of information before presenting a detailed proposal, so that, even if there are slight changes, it shouldn't impact the overall cost – unlike some contractors who might underbid and then have to increase the price during construction, making it more expensive than expected.

"I'd rather have my client happy in the end of the project, not in the beginning," Pozas explains.

What do you love about Laguna Beach?

The Pacific Ocean, the surf and the artist culture.

What is your favorite Laguna local spot?

Oak Street at PCH because I cut my hair with Nate at Logan Bros, we have Gina's and Rip Curl, and it's my favorite surf spot. (Oak and Brooks Street.) When I'm there, I'm relaxed.

What is something every Laguna resident should do/go experience?

Acai Republic. Acai is a Brazilian fruit. Very healthy and tasty!

SPREADING KINDNESS THROUGHOUT OUR CITY SHADI POURKASHEF

As the executive director of two nonprofits in town, I'm often asked two questions: Why kindness? And do you really believe you can create unity?

Everyone believes that sure, kindness is nice, but it can't possibly solve any big issues we're facing or help ease the suffering people are experiencing. Let's face it; life can be messy and we all struggle from time to time. We also know the power of how one kind gesture in the midst of the chaos can change our reality and fill us up with hope and love. Research shows that not only the giver and the receiver benefit but also all those around them feel less lonely, more connected, happier, more inclined to perform an act of kindness themselves and those ripples continues on. I can't think of anything more healing than that. BECAUSE there's so much suffering in the world, we need this healing. To fully explain this I need to get into the second question.

No one can, or needs to create unity because we are already united. The problem is called an illusion of separation spiritually and scientifically. Ego, greed, ignorance and fear are the main reasons why we choose this illusion over the truth. Spiritually there's no doubt in my mind that we are all interconnected and how fascinating is it now to see the scientific proof.

Quantum physics proves that all of us and everything in the entire universe are energy and vibration. Atoms are 99.99% space filled with vibration and connected to all other vibrations. This means, whether we like it or not, our lives and everything in the entire universe are indeed not only connected, but absolutely so with no separation.

However, we won't feel that connection if our focus remains on everything that separates us like gender, ethnicity, status, money, political views and so on. While I teach kindness, compassion, tolerance, friendship and understanding of those differences, my mission is not to create unity but to point all to the truth that we are, in fact, one unit. We are less likely to bully or hurt another when we realize we are ultimately hurting ourselves.

Another key factor is Quantum Entanglement Theory which proves when change is introduced to one particle that is part of an entangled pair, it instantaneously induces the same change in the other particle regardless of their distance. It's important to know that ALL particles in our world have at some point in time been entangled, meaning the universe is one big quantum system in which everything is correlated. So one act of violence can create another act of violence on the other side of the world just as one act of love can create another act of love.

Isn't it empowering to know we can create a kinder world just by focusing our attention on love and kindness? The more we cultivate compassion and kindness the more we can heal one another, help each other evolve and collectively help humanity evolve.

COBY LAIRD LAGUNA'S CUSTOM HOMEBUILDER

by Lauren Salinero

Building a custom home can be a daunting challenge. It's important to have an expert on your side to manage and oversee the entire project from inception to completion — someone who will work closely with your architect and designer to create a perfectly tailored home for you. Clients need a builder with the experience and attention to detail to advocate for them and ensure that their vision comes to life.

Laird Homebuilders Inc. is a second-generation custom homebuilder based in Laguna Beach. Owner Coby Laird grew up in Laguna, attended Laguna schools and was almost raised on his father's hillside construction sites. You could say building is in his blood. Laird started working in construction at an early age.

"I remember being given a metal Estwing hammer at age 3 that may have set my path in motion," he said.

He spent years learning every aspect of a build.

"I mastered the business end of a shovel and broom rather quickly," he said. "It was a great place to start and gave me the utmost respect for every single tradesperson on a job site who ultimately play their unique part in a project's success and execution. We're only as good as those we surround ourselves with!"

Every project Laird builds is a unique representation of his client. With the increasing number of home offices these days, people are realizing the importance of a truly tailored home, what best suits their lifestyle needs, and what doesn't. A great custom home should be well thought out and executed with an acute attention to detail. With a graphic design, furniture and cabinetry background, Laird is entirely focused on building well-executed quality aesthetic homes for his clients. Some of his favorite projects have included custom features like hidden doors to butler pantries and laundry rooms, and homes with completely custom run moldings and trim work packages.

"We prefer to take on a fewer number of projects, so that we're able to provide a higher level of supervision and coordination," he said. "We're more focused on a high quality over quantity that we believe ultimately suits Laguna's discerning clientele."

As a Laguna Beach native, Laird believes the properties here deserve to be built correctly and showcase what makes Laguna such a special area. His clients are his neighbors, fellow Little League parents, families and couples he'll run into at the grocery store. For Laird, it isn't just about building a house; it's about creating a home that will be cherished and lived in well.

What do you love about Laguna Beach?

"Everything! You have amazing restaurants, picturesque views, art galleries and affluence, and yet it remains homey and has a small-town feel. Laguna is changing, and it's definitely growing up, but I can appreciate that. Being semi-isolated helps keep Laguna special and a desired destination."

What is your favorite Laguna local spot?

"The beach is obviously a prominent feature for us and not any one specifically, just being on the coastline makes life here rather special. There are also a couple of local restaurants, Wine Gallery in the Hip District, Zinc Cafe and La Sirena Grill Downtown all owned by locals and on a regular rotation.

What is something every Laguna resident should do/go experience?

"It's kind of cliché in a way, but the Pageant of the Masters is pretty special. It's an art show where they paint live people into historical and significant paintings. When the lights are on and the stage is set, you're like, 'That's impressive.' But when they turn the stage lights off and people come out of character, and step out of the painting, that's pretty mind-blowing."

APPRECIATING LAGUNA THROUGH DON MURRAY'S LENS

by Marrie Stone

Photographer Don Murray fell in love with Southern California 25 years ago and moved to the area shortly thereafter. No wonder. It's a photographer's paradise. From dramatic cliffs to secluded coves and nonstop ocean sunsets, Laguna gave Murray plenty of material.

Four years ago, after spending as much time as possible in our enclave, he finally made Laguna Beach his home.

Murray picked up his first camera at age six. Fascinated by his father's Brownie Hawkeye — an instamatic point-and-shoot camera popular in the '60s — he took on chores to finance his hobby. By 17, Murray was working as an apprentice photojournalist with a rural, mid-western newspaper. He studied photography at Ohio State University, but majoring in business proved the more practical plan.

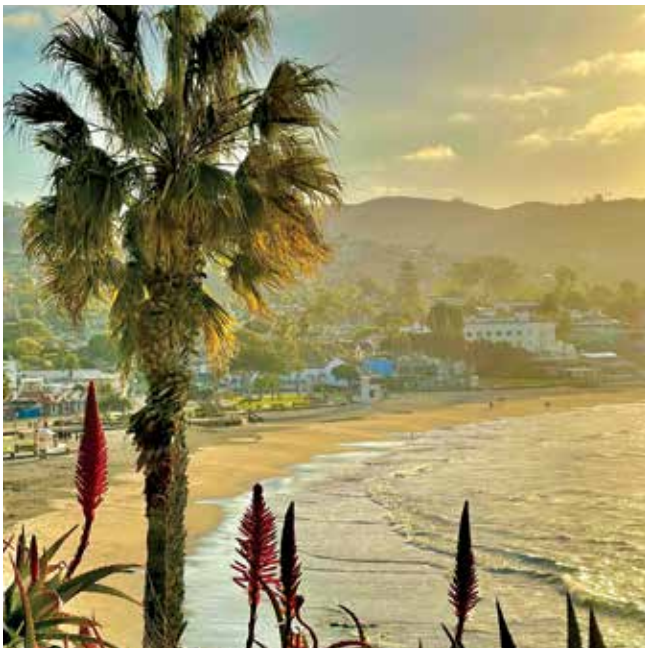

Still, his camera never left his side. Seeking out silhouettes, reflections, unique cloud formations and — of course — sunsets, Murray recently traveled to Italy, Croatia, Slovenia, and Portugal. Despite all those amazing destinations, he feels lucky to call Laguna home.

Murray frequently shares his stunning captures on social media. His Instagram account has more than 19,000 followers who appreciate his unique eye and oceanfront access. Not everyone is lucky enough to live in Laguna.

So what keeps drawing him back to those sunsets? "Sunsets bring tranquility to the soul, while simultaneously invigorating the spirit," Murray says. "They're filled with magical moments that let us experience the world as we once did as children: a world that's filled with wonders and adventures."

You can see more of Don Murray's work on Instagram: @donmurrayphotos

What do you love about Laguna?

Laguna is the quintessential Southern California beach town. We have the luxurious opportunity to experience the ocean every day. Where else can one find such extraordinary ocean vistas, with so many coves and beaches to enjoy, as well as miles of lush greenbelt to explore.

What are a few of your favorite local spots?

Shaw's Cove and Crescent Bay are my favorite beaches, while Heisler Park is my favorite place for a leisurely stroll. My favorite getaway is to hike up the Dartmoor Trail into the greenbelt.

What's something every local should experience?

A sunrise stroll along the beach. In the morning, it's mostly locals. Some are walking their dogs, some are enjoying their first cup of coffee, and nearly everyone is smiling and greeting those they meet along the way with a friendly "hello" and "good morning."

What suggestions do you offer people who want to take better pictures?

When you take a photo, seek to capture an image that makes you feel alive. It's your emotional connection to an image, and your ability to capture that emotion, that will let others share what you were experiencing when you took the picture.

A GOOGLE EYE VIEW OF LAGUNA BEACH

Here's something fun you can do sometimes while waiting in line. Open the maps app on your cellphone, switch to satellite and look for houses in Laguna with an unusual shape.

Laguna Beach is known for its diverse home designs that often can be seen from above. As you cruise around maps, you can find houses with curves, angles and unusual orientations — like the snail-shaped house on Nyes Place, the hexagonal house at the east end of Allview Terrace, and the curvy house at the end of Coronado Drive (I did that one).

A pair of architects from Netherlands decided to “visit” every house designed by the great LA architect John Lautner. They went on Google Earth and searched for unusually shaped homes, because Lautner almost never designed anything rectilinear. They rediscovered many forgotten Lautner masterpieces, because the unorthodox designs jumped out when seen from above.

Were architects like Lautner just trying to be clever or was something else happening? Lautner was interested in finding a special idea for each design and creating free, joyous spaces. The shape of his homes grew organically as he worked out these ideas in the architecture. His designs are unique, brilliant and timeless. Of course, there's nothing wrong with rectilinear houses, but interesting shapes suggest that perhaps something interesting is happening inside, as well.

There's a Lautner house located in Laguna Beach. Can you find it on Google Maps? (Hint: It's near Summit Drive and shaped like a triangle. Let me know if you find it or any other unusual homes.)

Happy hunting!

THE POWER OF PAYING IT FORWARD: LAUREN SEGAL

by Karen Nimetz

Growing up in Irvine in the 1980s, Lauren Segal always felt an innate need to help others. This desire was further fueled during a school trip to Rio de Janeiro, where she witnessed children begging for food on the streets. The experience deeply affected the then-16-year-old, making her realize the privilege she had, and the harsh realities faced by others. Upon returning home, Lauren passionately shared her experiences — which were often met with dismissive responses — with others. But this only motivated her to become more socially aware and educate herself about global issues and politics. She soon became an activist, even starting a “Students for Social Responsibility” club in high school.

Around this time, Lauren also developed a deep love for music. She saw music “as a tool to bring people together, create peace, serve as a way for people to let themselves go, and bring about social change.”

Lauren felt even more validated in her feelings as “Live Aid” and “We Are the World” would prove just how powerful music could be in helping bring social awareness and positive changes throughout the world.

In 2000, Lauren stumbled upon the house music scene in San Francisco, and it had a great impact on her life.

“Seeing all different kinds of people coming together and letting themselves go and connecting with one another was such an overwhelming, profound feeling,” she said. “It was then that I knew I wanted to use music in a way to create social change. It was a huge epiphany for me.”

Though heavily involved in activism for many years, it wasn’t until 2014 that Lauren found her true calling.

“I started to recognize the injustices in our criminal justice system,” she said. “I became really concerned with our county’s mass incarceration rate, which is the highest in the world.”

Lauren decided to use her love of music to bring about change.

She soon founded her nonprofit, Give a Beat. Initially, the organization focused all its attention on keeping youngsters off the streets and out of prison. After joining with the Arts for Healing and Justice Network, Give a Beat was able to connect with even more underserved youth in the area.

“We first began working with local youth through workshops and after-school programs, in juvenile detention halls, and even some Boys & Girls Clubs,” Lauren said. “We would bring in a [disc jockey] and production gear and engage with the kids through music.”

The success of the Youth Music Production & DJ Program led to an invitation by the state to begin a similar program in two California state prisons. The organization now serves three state prisons through its Prison Electronic Music Program, which focuses on “digital literacy and transferable life skills.”

Seeing the great impact of the first two programs, Lauren was inspired to create a third program for those recently released from prison. The On a New Track Reentry Mentoring Program pairs music-industry professionals with formerly incarcerated individuals as a part of a digital music production, DJing and business reentry course.

“We partner with other organizations that provide services to make sure everyone has their needs properly met and can focus on their musical passions alongside a professional music industry mentor,” she said.

Last year, the ever-growing organization launched a record label called Give a Beat records, featuring music created by program graduates.

Looking to the future, Lauren said the organization is currently developing a program for alumni, with input from successful graduates.

"As we continue to improve and grow our programs sustainably, we want to continue to support our program alumni with their life pursuits."

WEARING HER HEART ON HER SLEEVE

Just as Lauren was launching Give a Beat, her father, Tillman Segal, asked her to take over the family business. The shop had been a popular destination in the area for more than four decades, and Lauren had intermittently worked there for many years. Even though the prospect of running two companies at the same time was initially daunting, she was not about to pass on the opportunity of continuing her family's dream. Throughout the years, Lauren has found ways to make both organizations complement each other and provide mutual support. Her dedication to Give a Beat and love of The T-Shirt Co. at Laguna Beach have been instrumental in each of their successes. Not only does she strive to raise social awareness, but she incorporates this passion into the T-shirts she sells. In a recent staff meeting, Lauren asked her team about the causes that matter most to them. As part of her efforts to support these causes, she plans to highlight a different nonprofit organization each month. For instance, during a previous month, the shop focused on human rights and donated a portion of the proceeds from the sale of shirts with peace signs or messages of peace to Human Rights Watch.

Although both endeavors require a significant amount of time, dedication and hard work, Lauren said she feels blessed to do what she does and hopes to inspire others to get involved in charitable organizations in some capacity.

"I think a lot of people are afraid to get involved in activism because they think it's going to be depressing, but it's not," she said. "I believe helping other people and working to make a positive change relieves stress and makes you feel better."

What do you love about Laguna Beach?

"There is so much beauty and so many wonderful things to do all within close range, from walks in Heisler Park; hiking paths at Top of the World; to the dozens of beaches, coves and great coffee shops, restaurants, galleries, and little boutiques — all nearby. It's really an ideal vacation spot."

What is your favorite Laguna Beach hotspot?

"My favorite gem would probably be the Sawdust Festival. We send our customers there all summer and during Winter Fantasy. I love to support local artists and creators who laid the foundation for the creative and mindful culture of Laguna."

HOME TO CELEBRITIES AND COASTAL CHARM

Nestled along the stunning California coastline, Laguna Beach has been long celebrated for its natural beauty, vibrant culture and exquisite real estate offerings. Beyond its picturesque landscapes and pristine beaches, this idyllic seaside community has also attracted a roster of famous residents, adding a touch of glamour to its already captivating allure.

One such notable resident is Robert Englund, best known for his iconic portrayal of the menacing Freddy Krueger in the Nightmare on Elm Street film series. Englund finds solace in the serene ambiance of Laguna Beach, where he can unwind away from the spotlight. His choice of residence exemplifies the town's appeal to those seeking both luxury and tranquility.

Janet Evans, an accomplished Olympic swimmer, is also an esteemed Laguna Beach resident. Her illustrious career and achievements serve as a source of pride and inspiration for other residents.

Looking into the past, many golden age Hollywood stars use to call Laguna their home or weekend retreat. Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin and Mickey Rooney kept homes in the emerging artist colony in the 1940s.

Renowned author John Steinbeck found inspiration in Laguna while residing at 504 Park Ave. It was there he penned his acclaimed novel Tortilla Flats, drawing upon the town's rich cultural tapestry and vibrant community. Steinbeck's legacy continues to resonate in Laguna Beach, where his literary contributions are celebrated as cultural treasures.

Hobie Alter, a sailor and prominent surfboard designer, began his career at his family's Laguna Beach home in 1950. A hobby inspired by the beautiful coastal charm spawned a top-selling surfboard brand.

In the 1960s, landscape painter Roger Edward Kuntz moved to Laguna with his family. His work famously portrayed Southern California. In 2009, the Laguna Art Museum organized a retrospective exhibition of his work.

As with its former residents, Laguna Beach continues to offer a spectacular lifestyle to future residents. From stunning oceanfront estates boasting panoramic views of the Pacific Ocean to luxurious hillside villas nestled amidst lush foliage, the town's real estate market is as diverse as it is exclusive. With its prime location, world-class amenities and unrivaled natural beauty, Laguna Beach continues to attract homebuyers seeking the ultimate coastal refuge.

Whether you're drawn to Laguna Beach for its celebrity cachet, stunning scenery or vibrant culture, one thing is certain – this enchanting seaside town offers a lifestyle unlike any other. Laguna Beach continues to captivate and inspire those who are fortunate enough to call it home.

LAGUNA LIFESAVER AND ENTREPRENEUR: HEIDI MILLER

by Karen Nimetz

Anyone who knows Heidi Miller would easily describe her as the epitome of selfless compassion. Of her giving spirit, Miller credits her parents who taught their children to “always be of service to others.”

Miller, a Laguna Beach resident and small business owner for more than four decades, initially moved to the area to open a frozen yogurt shop, Heidi's Frögen Yozurt. After successfully growing the shop into 120 stores throughout nine states, Miller sold the company in 1990, and opened Tight Assets, a popular, upscale fashion store for women. Miller also owns World Newsstand and World Newsstand Shoppe, as well as the recently opened value-priced fashion store Twenty Below, where all items are $19.95. All four businesses are located on PCH in Laguna Beach.

A former nationally ranked gymnast and body builder, Miller is very active and health conscious, participating in local boot camp classes three times a week. It is her healthy lifestyle and generous soul that unknowingly led Miller to become a true lifesaver.

In 1991, upon learning that a close friend battling lymphoma needed a bone marrow transplant, Miller helped recruit people to get tested in order to find a match. After getting tested herself, Miller found out that she in fact was a match and immediately agreed to the procedure. Miller, who donates blood every 60 days, always looks for a new opportunity to give back. In 2017, she was given another chance of a lifetime when she found out that Bruce Cook, a man whom she did not know personally, was in need of a kidney transplant.

Miller sprang into action once again and got tested to see if she was a match for Cook.

“I had read that Bruce is 6’5” and 240 pounds and being that I’m only 5’3 and 118 pounds, I thought I probably won’t be a match,” she said. “However, I thought that if I got tested then I could tell all my friends that I got tested, and I wasn’t a match but why don’t you get tested, too. That was my thought process. I never really thought I’d be a perfect match for Bruce Cook.”

When asked how life has been since the kidney donation, Miller happily reported that, “Bruce has been off dialysis for five and a half years and has had three beautiful grandchildren born since then.”

Miller’s generosity truly knows no bounds, for after providing lifesaving gifts of bone marrow and a kidney, Miller sought to help save even more lives. After mentoring many potential live kidney donors, Miller met a woman who desperately wanted to donate a kidney to her father but could not afford to take time off from work for the surgery and recovery time needed. That’s when Miller decided to start an organization to help support donors and recipients.

The organization — LifeSavers Foundation — provides financial assistance to living organ donors paying for expenses related to lost wages, lodging, travel, medical appointments and more. Miller is passionately involved in every step. The organization also helps raise awareness and educates the public that donating a kidney in today’s world is very safe.

"God gave us two kidneys, but you only need one, so why don't you share your spare," Miller said. "That's my big motto: Share Your Spare!"

Known as "The Kidney Whisperer," Miller has mentored about 150 people and helped to match more than 50 donors and recipients with approximately 40 having now had transplants.

"I mentor donors and recipients from the very beginning of the process," she said. "I do what I can to ensure that the process is as easy as possible for them."

Given her own experience, Miller has a way of quelling any fears that both donors and recipients may have.

"Hospital staff tend to be so clinical, but to have someone [who] has recently donated a kidney, talking you through the steps — it just makes it easier and brings more comfort."

Even with Miller devoting so much of her time to her successful Laguna Beach businesses, she still makes sure to dedicate herself fully to her foundation and continues to seek out opportunities to help those in need.

"I've based my life around giving back to others and being of service when I can, and because of that, I have reaped a lot of benefits that I think otherwise I would not have."

For more information about the Lifesavers Foundation, email Heidi Miller at heidimillerkidneydonor@gmail.com

What do you love most about Laguna Beach?

"There are two things — the first would be the people. I have traveled the world and have never found a city where the people are as kind, giving, compassionate and caring as at Laguna Beach. Second, is the natural beauty. Everywhere you turn in Laguna Beach is natural beauty."

Favorite Laguna local spot?

"My two favorite places are Victoria Beach and Heisler Park. Heisler Park has some of the most beautiful landscapes and vistas you'll ever see. There are concerts throughout the year at Heisler Park that the city puts on that are fabulous for the community. And if you just want some quiet time by yourself, take a walk and sit in your own solitude at Victoria Beach. Take in the natural beauty and just reflect on how lucky we all are to be here."

Something that every Laguna Beach resident should do or see in the area?

"I think everybody who lives in Laguna has an obligation to give back and be supportive of all the restaurants and businesses. Laguna's demographics are small. We are about 23,000 people, with only about 16,000 who are permanent residents. With the amount of retail and restaurants that we have, the locals should support all the businesses. So, before you drive to Newport or Dana Point for dinner, rethink that and try the local restaurants and businesses that support you. The downtown businesses are immensely important because they provide a vibrant downtown district with wonderful restaurants and shops that make people want to come to Laguna. So, residents should support the local downtown businesses that are supporting the residents."

ADOPTING DOGS, NOT DIAGNOSES

by Lauren Gonsalves

When you hear that Unconditional Rescue is a place to adopt senior or disabled dogs, you might be expecting a slew of sob stories that will pull on your heartstrings and bring tears to your eyes. If that's the case, you've come to the wrong rescue. Unconditional Rescue isn't a place to feel sorry for special needs and senior dogs; it's a place full of the excitement and joy of bringing home a new member of the family.

This special rescue all started with a pup named Carlo.

"The journey to the idea of Unconditional began when we adopted Carlo, a stray pug with a missing rear leg," said Amy Mack, Unconditional Rescue's co-founder. "Carlo taught us that disabled means different — not sad or limited. In fact, he was the most exuberant and wildly personable dog we had ever had. Carlo inspired us to dig more deeply into the plight of senior and disabled dogs, and sadly, we found out that our misconceptions were common."

Upon realizing the crisis that shelters face with their difficulty finding homes for these truly awesome dogs — less than 1% of animal rescue organizations are focused on senior and special needs dogs, and these pups are the fastest-growing shelter population in America, typically the first to be euthanized and last to be adopted — Amy and her husband, Julian, decided they needed to do something. Four years later, Unconditional Rescue is a thriving nonprofit that rescues senior dogs at least 8 years old and dogs that have a physical condition that will make them disabled for the rest of their lives.

While you may feel intimidated at the thought of adopting a disabled dog, Chief Operating Officer Sabrina Neas said it best.

"It's time for the world to stop feeling sorry for these friends or thinking that they're going to be too much work. All pets are work! It's just a different kind of attention they need. Adopting a senior or special needs dog shouldn't be a charity act. It should be as fun and exciting as getting a puppy, because it really is fun and exciting in its own way."

And, with Unconditional Rescue, you never have to handle it alone.

"We are always available," Sabrina said. "When you are adopting a dog from us, you really have a more holistic idea of what you're signing up for."

For now, these pups are cared for by fosters until they can be adopted. That is set to change once Unconditional Rescue opens its adoption facility in Laguna Hills later this year. Unlike most shelters, Unconditional Rescue will have a homelike setting that is crucial to bringing these pups out of their shells, making them feel comfortable, and letting their personalities shine.

Another benefit of Unconditional Rescue's adoption center is its sister entity, Rise Pet Health, a 20,000-square-foot, technologically advanced, multispecialty veterinary hospital with 24/7 care. Also open to the public and servicing the Laguna Beach community, Rise provides free medical care to Unconditional Rescue's dogs.

With medical care being the No. 1 expense for most rescues, typically exceeding 50% of operational costs, having that covered is invaluable. This allows the rescue to do so much more for the pups, and the community of Laguna Beach is a huge part of that growth.

"The culture [of Laguna Beach] is just so dog-friendly and animal-loving," Sabrina said. "I like that Laguna is not afraid to do things [its] own way, and that's really what we're trying to do."

"The Laguna Beach community is absolutely central to our mission," Amy added. "Nothing extraordinary gets built without a community, and we are so fortunate that Laguna is home to people who want to make an impact — who truly want to make the world better — and we're excited to partner with our community to bring Unconditional to life."

If you're lucky, you might encounter Amy and Julian on one of their regular walks around Laguna.

"We do love [Victoria] Beach," Amy said. "It's home, and we have wonderful neighbors — human and canine. We like to mix it up, walking all over our diverse and beautiful city. We see a different set of locals on each walk and have made so many friends through our dogs."

While adoption is the main focus of the rescue, there are many ways to become involved. Visit them online at www.unconditionalrescue.com to sign up for the newsletter and keep up with the pups. If you'd like to adopt but aren't sure if a dog on the website is a good fit, they are trialing a matching program to locate a dog that is right for you.

You might even be surprised by how easily a senior or special needs dog would fit into your life. Sabrina had these tips for finding your new best friend.

"Are you an outgoing person who would like a dog that gets lots of attention and starts fun conversations?" she asked. "Then a dog in a wheelchair would be perfect for you. Are you a young professional who is really busy but still wants a canine companion? Then a sleepy senior dog would be a perfect match. Are you inspired by videos of humans with indescribably strong bonds with their dogs, where they come up with fun activities to together? Then I think you would enjoy having a blind dog."

It's realizing how great these pups can be for your family that opens doors and hearts to senior and special needs dogs, something that the entire team at Unconditional Rescue strives for every day.

"Our ambitions are big," Amy said. "Not only do we want to facilitate adoptions, but we want to change hearts and minds so that people realize how wonderful senior and special dogs truly are."

by Karen Nimetz

Since 2014, Powur has been on a mission to accelerate the adoption of renewable energy worldwide. During that time, the residential solar company, founded by CEO Jonathan Budd, has rocketed to success with over 10,000 installations and become the first solar company to offset 100% of emissions from the solar manufacturing process.

Powur's impressive accolades, including being ranked number 43 on Inc. Magazine's annual Inc. 5000 list of the fastest growing companies in America in 2022, comes as no surprise as the company is just as dedicated to environmental preservation and customer care as they are to providing top-notch solar energy systems. The superior customer service can easily be attributed to the thorough training that all company employees and consultants receive. Rick Santa Maria, a Residential Solar Consultant with the company, and a resident of Arch Beach Heights, says each consultant is guided by a company certified mentor until they have proven their knowledge and expertise in the field. He adds, "Every customer is assigned their own dedicated project manager, who assesses their utility bill and future energy needs before crafting a custom savings proposal for the home. This way we never oversell or under power a property."

Skyrocketing energy bills and the sole reliance on power grids have inspired many to choose solar for their home. Santa Maria notes the safety and security benefits that solar offers saying, "if someone in the home uses medical equipment that relies on electricity and you experience a power outage, that could be pose a serious risk to their health and wellbeing." In addition, Santa Maria points out that "when you purchase a home, you are automatically assigned to the local utility company. The rates are set and you cannot negotiate that price. With a home solar system, you gain some of that control back." The federal tax credit of 30%, also provides a great incentive and can help defray some of the cost of installation. Those who do not qualify for the tax credit, due to limited tax liability, can take advantage of several loan programs available, as well as lease options.

As the first 100% virtual, residential solar company in the cloud, Powur provides affordable and customized solar solutions to homeowners in a unique way. Santa Maria explains, "We don't have warehouses, installation trucks or crews. We have vetted the best-in-class service providers and installers all under one cloud-based app program which allows us to do business anywhere in the world, as long as there is an Internet connection."

Powur has a world-class, end-to-end solar sales enablement and product fulfillment platform that empowers the entire ecosystem, (sellers, installers, homeowners, and Powur) to thrive.

Powur has certainly set themselves apart from any other competitor. As Santa Maria says, "The true strength of Powur lies in their innovation, their customer service, and their in-house products. We have access to the best panels, inverters, storage solutions and equipment in the industry as well as providing our clients with an all-encompassing 30-year Powur Care Warranty, that covers everything including labor, workmanship and parts replacement.

Another in-house service Powur is able to offer is a roofing service for clients wanting to upgrade their roof surface before installing solar panels.

Visit powur.com/rick.santamaria to learn more about how Powur can help put power back in your hands.

ASSISTANCE LEAGUE OF LAGUNA BEACH

by Kathy Pawluk, ALLB President

Assistance League of Laguna Beach (ALLB) is an all-volunteer organization whose members put caring and commitment into action through local philanthropic programs. Founded in 1952 by 14 local women and chartered in 1962 as a chapter of the National Assistance League, ALLB has a 70-plus-year history of "transforming lives and strengthening communities."

ALLB sponsors Operation School Bell (OSB), an umbrella encompassing multiple philanthropic programs that target children from preschool through high school. Among the OSB programs are Even Start backpacks filled with school supplies, basic clothing and a gift card for children participating in the Laguna Beach Boys & Girls Club preschool program, and Chapters for Children, in which the organization collaborates with six other Assistance League chapters at Camp Pendleton to clothe children of military families for school. Also under OBS are scholarships awarded to deserving Laguna Beach High School seniors. Last year, $40,000 in scholarships were presented to nine local seniors.

ALLB also funds community outreach programs, including Collaborative Courts, a foundation whose mission is to provide a safety net to individuals participating in this court program to overcome substance abuse and/or mental health issues, and the Lifelong Laguna program facilitated through Susi Q.

The Early Intervention Program (EIP) is ALLB's signature philanthropic program. EIP is geared toward babies up to age 1, who have been identified as needing special attention. During weekly sessions, specially trained therapists evaluate each baby and work with the parents to provide a hands-on experience to guide them to the best possible outcome for their child. The parents also meet with a licensed marriage and family counselor to share resources and discuss their experiences and emotions with others in similar situations. ALLB funds EIP and provides the facility at no cost to families.

While ALLB welcomes monetary donations, its primary source of funding is through its thrift shop. The store is staffed by volunteers and stocked with donations of new and gently used items. It has been labeled by shoppers as one of the best thrift shops in Southern California, so if you're a "thrifter" or simply looking for a bargain, visit the shop and look around.

How Can You Help?

Shop in ALLB's thrift shop, located at 526 Glennerly St. in Laguna Beach. Operating hours are Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday from 10 a.m.-3 p.m.

Make a Tax-Deductible Donation

New or gently used Items for the thrift shop can be dropped off in the garage behind the shop Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m.- 3 p.m.

LAGUNA BEACH DOJO

by Karen Nimetz

When Oregon native Jeff Kash first moved to Southern California, he and his girlfriend (now his wife of over 23 years) sought out an activity that they both could do while she was obtaining her master's degree in Oregon. The two decided on Tae Bo, but the more Kash attended class the more intrigued he became with the martial arts side of the sport. He soon transitioned to martial arts and quickly came to see the dojo as his second home. For the past 21 years, Master Kash, now a

6th degree black belt, has been sharing his love and knowledge of martial arts with the Laguna Beach community as the owner and instructor of Laguna Beach Dojo. He has earned numerous awards both for his karate skills as well as for his dedication and proven success as an instructor. For Kash and his students, the lessons learned in the dojo go far beyond that of physical skills. Kash explains, "We offer a pretty diverse character development program, instead of just focusing on the physicality of martial arts itself. With that, we have really expanded upon and ensured the development of the additional benefits that a discipline of martial arts training can provide."

Newcomers to the dojo are pleasantly surprised by their overall transformation from the teachings. "People that take the journey all the way to black belt automatically develop a whole myriad of traits and character development skills that they didn't realize they would get when they first started training." Kash adds, "From the very beginning of training, we make sure that our students are developing skills that are going to help them be successful in all areas of their life, not just in martial arts."

Kash says that one of the keys to a young student's success is involvement of the parents/caregivers. "It's important for me to communicate with the parents and build a relationship with them so that there isn't a disconnect from what I'm trying to teach in the dojo and what they are trying to instill at home." He adds, "that open line of communication and trust creates a bridge to success because it's a team effort of everyone helping the student grow to their maximum potential."

The connections made at the dojo are not only strong but long-lasting as well. "We recognize that martial arts is a long journey, often a lifetime journey. The more committed and consistent the student is with the training and teachings, the greater the benefit, and the more prepared they will be to go into college, work or whatever they end up doing later in life."

What do you love about Laguna Beach?

The feeling of community. Everywhere I go, I run into someone I know.

What is your favorite Laguna local spot?

I keep it simple: coffee from Laguna Coffee and walk down to the beach at Oak St.

What is something every Laguna resident should do/go experience?

The food and karate, of course! La Sirena, Seabutter, Poke Tiki and so many others! From casual to sophisticated, Laguna truly has it all.

FAIRY GARDEN INSPIRES CREATIVE FUN FOR ALL AGES

by Blair Parke

At Laguna Beach Library, there is a magical world tucked away for everyone to enjoy. With this year marking its 10th anniversary, the Laguna Beach Butterfly and Fairy Garden combines whimsical fun and environmental education in its 1,800-square-foot site. The location contains more than 30 fairy homes and scenes amid pollinator-friendly plants, shrubs and trees. Each month offers a new theme for the garden and includes activities that children can participate in, from decorating Christmas ornaments to activities connected to fairies and/or the environment.

"Our focus is finding a way to get kids outside and exploring, continuing that idea of play," said Simone Adams, who, partnered with Kim Shields, leads seven volunteers in maintaining the garden and participating in various events. Annual activities such as the Earth Day Celebration and the library's End of Summer Reading Program Butterfly and Fairy Festival draw hundreds of guests to the garden, where children can become "honorary fairies." One extremely popular activity at the location is the Fairy Mail. There, kids can write letters to a specific fairy at the garden. Letters number in the hundreds each month! Youngsters then can return to receive their replies.

©Tarek Jadeba

Created from the visionary mind of sculptor and longtime Laguna Beach resident Jessica deStefano, the Fairy Garden continues to inspire children of all ages to believe and dream while caring for the world they live in.

The Laguna Beach Library is located at 363 Glenneyre St. For more information or to view the garden's upcoming events, visit it on Instagram.

exceeding EXPECTATIONS

"Jennifer was extremely pleasant, patient and generous with her time in showing us many properties in Laguna Beach before we decided. She had excellent knowledge of the marketplace, what we were looking for, and kept us well informed throughout the process. She was there every step of the way until we closed, and has even been available to us post purchase to look after the house as it is our second home. And always with a smile. I would recommend Jennifer to anyone looking to purchase a home in the area."
